SUPERINTENDENT REPORT AND AGENDA:

Dr. Avery said student projects from the Alan Wallack STEM Center were displayed in the room.

John DeMattia, board member of the Hall Neighborhood House, said Alan Wallack, who worked for the city and the board for 37 years, was his best friend. After Mr. Wallack retired, he spent another 17 years in the maintenance facilities department as a consultant. He said Alan was dedicated to the kids in Bridgeport. He said along with Steve Salem, the executive vice president of the Cal Ripken Foundation, he made a commitment to honor Alan by introducing STEM learning centers in conjunction with the foundation and Hall Neighborhood House. He said over a million dollars was raised. The goal is to have a learning center in every K-8 school in Bridgeport, with long-term sustainability in mind.

Robert Dziernda of Hall Neighborhood House said the program is currently in 22 schools, with six more to be up by the end of June. He said $40,000 per school includes support to teachers, schools, and students. Science educators assist the teachers in implementation. There is no cost to the board or the city.

Dr. Avery said he saw the program deployed at the Juvenile Detention Center and he observed those students being engaged.

Mr. Dziernda said the intent is to continue this on to high schools.

Mr. Sokolovic said Mr. Wallack was a great guy and he described him helping his son get a playground at Park City Magnet and providing updates on the progress.

Mr. Traber described his experience in seeing students engaged with a STEM program put on by the Bridgeport Library in the past. Mr. Dzuernda described the effect on students' learning coding, problem-solving, and critical thinking.

Mr. Benejan Grajales said he worked closely with Mr. Wallack for twenty years and he was amazing person.

Dr. Avery played a video on the Bridgeport Day at the Capitol. He said there were about 200 students, staff and community partners in attendance, along with state and local officials.

Dr. Avery said upcoming events include a Math Meet at Sacred Heart University; the district Talent Show; a teacher recognition ceremony at Harding High; and the June 13th graduations at Kennedy Stadium.

Ms. Cassermere said she had a lot of fun learning at Bridgeport Day, including speaking to vendors.

In response to a question, Dr. Avery said he believed Capt. Grech's overtime is paid by the city. Margaret Hughes, executive director of school turnaround, said curriculum writing for health classes is planned for this summer. Paul Catuccio, athletics director, said there are currently health classes at the high schools. Dr. Avery said the curriculum needed to be revised.

Ms. Cassermere pleaded with parents to ask board members important questions out in the community. She noted five board seats are coming up in the election. She urged parents to consider courses on internet addiction, reading to their kids for twenty minutes a day, attending their local PTSO and PAC meetings, and asking open-ended questions of children. She also suggested volunteering on field trips, attending board meetings, and voting for the right candidates.

Dr. Avery said principals engage parents in their individual campus buildings as well.

Ms. Cassermere said she understood board members don't have to pay to come to the district talent show. She encouraged board members to pay the $25.02 for two talent shows if they are really concerned about the financial health of the district.

Mr. Traber said speaking to state reps and senators about money from Hartford is still important. He noted the legislators were still fighting with the governor about the allocation of money for education. He said the educational cost sharing formula needed to be fixed. He said a prior proposal would have meant $57 million extra for Bridgeport. He said the state has realized a surplus in recent years, and it now exceeds $6 billion, so they can afford it.

Mr. Sokolovic said he will be attending the talent show, but not be paying. He said that he was on a fixed income, and it was not fair to insinuate those not paying do not care about our children. He said this is what CAFE tells us we should not be doing.

Dr. Avery introduced a video about Alan Wallack STEM labs and Hall Neighborhood House.

In response to a question, Ms. Perez said the cost of the talent show is $25 for both shows.

Mr. Sokolovic said he did further research, and CAGE has policy which addresses his concerns regarding the word “equity.” He said many districts modify policies to fit their needs.
